Hackney's pyromusical fireworks show is set to return to Clissold Park on 5 November – and the Council is giving away 300 free tickets

GET ready for a cracking night out as Hackney's pyromusical fireworks show is set to return to Clissold

Park on 5 November. Following on from last year's sell-out success, tickets to the family-friendly event are currently on sale. They cost £7.50 for adults and £2.50 for children who live in the borough; and £8.50 and £3.50 respectively for non-residents. The Council is also giving away 300 free tickets through two offers: one for residents and one for registered Hackney-based charities. For more info on how to obtain tickets, turn to page 2.

AFFORDABLE RENTS

HACKNEY residents struggling to afford spiralling rents will be the first to benefit from the London Living Rent.

The borough is the first to commit to getting 500 new homes built under the initiative announced by Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan.

The properties – a key part of the new Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville's, manifesto – will have rents based on a third of average household incomes in the borough, and be offered to low and middle-income households facing rent hikes in the private sector. More than 32,000 households rent privately in Hackney, a figure that has doubled in 10 years.

The London Living Rent could be set at around £1,000, which would save a family renting a two-bed private flat £400 per month. Full details will be set out by the Mayor of London in the coming months.

The project will also support the Council's existing estate regeneration programme, which is the largest in London, and will see thousands of modern, high-quality homes for social rent and shared ownership built to replace ageing Council homes that are uneconomical to repair.

Mayor Glanville said: "Hackney is already building more social housing than anywhere else in the capital, and we won't stop building these homes. But it's also vital that there are more homes which residents on middle-incomes can afford to rent.

"The London Living Rent will help people who work hard but are getting priced out of our city, which is why I'm proud that my first act as Mayor is to pledge that Hackney will be the first borough to see 500 homes built at this affordable level."

As part of Mayor Glanville's pledge to put housing at the heart of Hackney's agenda, he has appointed two specialist advisers. Cllr Sem Moema as Mayoral Adviser for Private Renting and Housing Affordability, and Cllr Rebecca Rennison as Mayoral Adviser for Advice Services and Preventing Homelessness.

THE Council is giving away 300 free tickets to Hackney's pyromusical firework show, which is set to take place at Clissold Park on 5 November.

One hundred pairs of free tickets are available to residents, and a further 100 tickets are also being given to registered Hackney-based charities.

Tickets are also available to buy at £7.50 for adults and £2.50 for children who live in the borough; and £8.50 and £3.50 respectively for non-residents.

This is the third consecutive year that Hackney is hosting the fireworks display, following on from two previous sell-out shows.

Mood lighting will give the park a magical atmosphere, while street performances will animate the pathways around the park. A children's funfair and food and drink stalls will also accompany this year's pyromusical display, which will see fireworks synchronised to music.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, said: “Last year's firework display was a big success, the show brings a magical atmosphere to Clissold Park, beautifully lighting the night sky as winter sets in. Hackney's pyromusical is a highlight of the borough's social calendar.”

Residents who wish to apply for the free fireworks tickets should e-mail: park.events@hackney.gov.uk with their name, postcode and the subject title ‘Residents Free Tickets Prize Draw’ before 7 October.

Hackney-based registered charities should also e-mail: park.events@hackney.gov.uk with the name of the organisation, registered charity number, postcode, and subject title ‘Concessionary Tickets’. Winners will be notified by 8 October.

Gates open at 5.30pm and the display starts at 7pm. The display is 20 minutes and is suitable for all ages. Entertainment will be weather-dependant.

MUSICIAN and TV presenter Kim Wilde opened a new garden at Mildmay Hospital, saying that her own experience had taught her that 'people and gardens belong together'.

The hospital, which specialises in treating HIV associated brain impairment and was made famous by Princess Diana's visits in the late 1980s, has transformed a little-used plot into a courtyard garden for patients. Officially opening the space, Kim said: "It is not as easy as it may seem to get everything to come together and work, especially in such a small area with so many challenges. Well done to everyone who made this happen, it really is looking absolutely lovely."

After cutting a ceremonial ribbon, Kim planted a yellow Mildmay rose. The Mildmay choir, comprising members of the hospital's music therapy group, sang 'All things bright and beautiful,' and afternoon tea was served.

Director of fundraising, Kerry Reeves Kneip, added: "We are so proud that we have been able to transform what was a very dull and uninspiring plot into such a beautiful space. It now teems with life and colour."

News in brief

Hackney Children's Choir seeks talented new recruits

LOCAL children have been making their voices heard in a unique collaboration between St Paul's Church West Hackney and the internationally renowned music department of St Paul's Cathedral.

Open to musically gifted children between the ages of eight and 11, the Hackney Children's Choir is directed by Tom Daggett, leader of the Cathedral's music outreach programme. Every Tuesday in term time, they meet after school in St Paul's Church, in Stoke Newington, to rehearse a wide variety of choral music from Bach to Britten.

Reverend Niall Weir, church rector and choir co-founder, said: "The choir is a unique opportunity to be part of a professionally-run choir. It gives children the enriching experience of making music to a high level, a chance to develop their potential and a supportive environment of musical and behavioural standards."

Choir membership costs £10 a term – the equivalent of £1 per rehearsal – and bursaries are offered to children who receive free school meals. The choir also engages in public performances in prestigious venues like St Paul's Cathedral and Royal Albert Hall.

Mother of one of the choristers, Rebecca Vaitilingam, said: "My daughter has benefitted hugely from being part of the choir. She has gained confidence in her singing and musicality, but in particular has loved being part of a team, performing in some really special places."

For more info, call Tom Daggett on: 07960 354 338; or e-mail: tdaggett@stpaulscathedral.org.uk. Alternatively, drop in to a rehearsal at St Paul's West Hackney on Tuesdays between 4pm and 5.15pm.

Homerton sports clinic gets a boost from Tessa Sanderson

HOMERTON hospital's facilities are set to reach Olympic standards, after gold medalist Tessa Sanderson presented them with a new, state-of-the-art ultrasound scanner.

The javelin thrower, who won gold in the 1984 Olympic Games, handed over the Aplio 500 ultrasound scanner on 8 August. The technology will be used in the Homerton Sports Clinic's Sir Ludwig Guttman Centre, where it will help locate muscle and tendon damage and devise rehabilitation treatments for patients.

The gift is part of a new partnership between the hospital, Toshiba Medical Systems and the Tessa Sanderson Foundation, which aims to support the fitness and wellbeing of young athletes as they train for sporting events.

Consultant Physiotherapist, Peter Resteghini, said: "We are delighted to be forging these close links with Tessa and her foundation. Young people seeking an athletics career need all the support they can get to make a success of it and achieve great things. Our sports clinic expertise – together with state-of-the-art equipment such as the ultrasound machine – will, we hope, play a part in these individual success stories."

Dalston day & night

DALSTON is set to display a selection of dynamic art, as a new exhibition of street photography opens this month.

The Dalston Street Show, which forms part of the Photomonth East London international photography festival, will take place across Dalston venues over a period of four weeks.

The exhibition opens in Dalston Square at 6.30pm on 14 October, and is set to include a giant inflatable screen showing all the show's photographs accompanied by music from the Band Off The Wall and poetry by the WordLovers Society.

The theme for the art show is 'Dalston Day and Night', and it will exhibit images demonstrating the diversity of Dalston, its people, its street life and built environment.

The photographs can be seen from the street, displayed in the windows of Dalston's many shops, restaurants, bars, cafes, and cultural spaces, on poster boards, and inside a selection of venues.

The Dalston Street Show is supported by the Council, Alternative Arts and theprintspace.

Voters set to elect new ward councillor for Hoxton West

VOTERS in Hoxton West are set to elect a new ward councillor after Philip Glanville stepped down when he became the Mayor of Hackney last month. Nominations for the post close at 4pm on 7 October, and voting will take place on 3 November.

For more information and to register to vote, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/elections

Two derelict sites set to be turned into affordable housing

AN ABANDONED pub and a block of ageing bedsits in Frampton Park Estate will be transformed into 45 modern new homes as part of the Council's ambitious regeneration programme.

The former Frampton Arms pub, demolished in 2009, and Lyttleton House, a block of bedsits on Well Street that do not meet modern Council standards, will make way for high-quality properties for social rent, shared ownership and outright sale after the scheme won planning permission last month. The regeneration plans, which form part of the Council's work to build nearly 3,000 new homes on 18 sites across the borough, follow close consultation with residents and architects on designs. New play areas, waste and recycling improvements and cycle storage facilities will also be provided as part of the work, which is due to start next year.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "Working closely with residents we're helping to deliver the new generation of genuinely affordable housing that Hackney needs. "We're building more social housing than anywhere else in London, and our regeneration programme will bring thousands more properties to help our borough's families find an affordable place to call home."

Open day for leaseholders and freeholders on 22 October

LEASEHOLDERS and freeholders are invited to attend an informative open day at The Urswick School, on 22 October, from 11am to 4pm.

The event is set to be attended by a number of service providers, including the Council's cleaning, repairs, regeneration, leasehold, ASB, recycling, private sector housing and resident participation teams.

Other agencies will include Age UK, The Leasehold Advisory Service, Shelter, Action of Hearing Loss, SHINE Fuel Poverty and the Fire Brigade.

Tenants who have applied to exercise their Right to Buy are also invited to attend the event.

Fabulous family fun

OVER 600 residents attended a fun day in St Thomas Square and enjoyed free food and drink, Zumba, bike repairs, face painting and a bouncy castle for children.

The event, organised by Hackney's resident participation team, took place on 17 September. As well as having fun, residents took the opportunity to seek advice and get involved in Council projects.

Over 120 people signed up for the Council's smoke-free service to help them kick the habit; some 40 residents expressed interest in 'Ways Into Work', a free recruitment service; and over 50 residents sought help with income management and budgeting.

The day was also a chance to promote online citizens panel, Hackney Matters, which is made up of residents who give feedback on issues affecting everyone living and working in the borough. Over 30 people signed up to the panel at the fun day alone, taking its membership to more than 1,800 people.

Information stalls on topics including regeneration, anti-social behaviour, recycling and said: “It was so busy. The residents coming in were really excited. Everyone was there for a good time. The children were fantastic, and couldn't get enough of the free ice cream.”

Hackney Health Hubs all proved popular.

Geoff Gleadhill, resident and fun day volunteer, added: “The day was absolutely brilliant. I think the children really enjoyed themselves. I've never seen so many smiling faces. And the food was out of this world! It was very well organised.”

Cllr Claydon McKenzie, Cabinet

Member for Housing Services, added: “Thanks to all who made the Hackney Housing Fun Day such a huge success. Everyone who attended – both residents and volunteers – had a brilliant day, enjoying the activities and food on offer, and learning more about vital Council services.”

Black arts and activism

Hackney has a long history of migration and settlement. Black History Season celebrates the contribution these communities have made here

HACKNEY is celebrating black history and culture with a three-month long season of free events and activities, including an exhibition exploring black art and activism in the borough between the 1960s and 2000s.

This year's Black History Season has something for all ages, including a theatre workshop for young people; a screening of the film 'Belle'; history talks; and music, story, and craft workshops for children.

One of the highlights is a new exhibition at Hackney

Museum, which opens on 4 October and explores 'people power, migration and politics' in the borough.

From the cosmopolitan art scene of the Caribbean and the politics of protest in 1960s Britain, to the radical use of literature and social spaces in the latter half of the 20th century, the exhibition looks at black British art in Hackney over the last 50 years.

The borough has a long history of migration and settlement, with each new community enriching the area and leaving its mark for future generations.

Since the 1960s, the area's cheap housing has attracted early career artists and recent migrants, creating a unique environment of creativity and inspiration.

The exhibition focuses on the influence of migration, generational identity, and societal racism on black British art. It also looks at the impact of these factors on grassroots organisations, and those who worked hard to help drive social change through direct action and creative projects.

Through film, photography, historical objects and shared memories, visitors can see how African and Caribbean heritage influenced and helped shape the landscape of arts and culture and uncover the generational experiences of identity, and the rise of multiculturalism in Hackney.

Another highlight for this year's Black History Season is a performance from Jamaican poet and social commentator, Mutabaruka. He will be revisiting excerpts from his radio show and poetic repertoire and also discussing the social issues that affect people today.

Finally, an 'international sporting legends' workshop, for five to nine-year-olds, will look at some of the world's most famous black athletes, including boxer Muhammad Ali and Alice Coachman, the first black woman to win an Olympic gold medal.

In Hackney, events are free and take place at the museum, archives, and libraries across the borough until the end of December. Some events require advance booking.

Sportsman Ade Orogbemi represents Great Britain in a wheelchair basketball match against Turkey (pictured). He has represented Team GB in three Paralympic Games, including Rio 2016

Basking in basketball glory

By Harriet Worsley

ONCE you've decided to aim for the very highest level, you have to give it absolutely everything," says Ade Orogbemi. Adding: "You have to put that thing first and put everything else to one side."

He should know. The wheelchair basketball player has represented Great Britain in three consecutive Paralympic Games and has only just returned from Rio, where his team won bronze.

"I was born in Lagos, Nigeria, but came to Hackney when I was about 11," he recalls. Adding: "It was a bit of a shock, everything was different – from the temperature to the way of life. But you learn to adapt as you go along."

Sudden changes are a feature of Ade's life. In 1997 he was coming home from Hackney Community College when a man stopped him on Mare Street.

Ade says: "He asked me if I was interested in trying wheelchair basketball. I knew nothing at all about it. I was into football, and had played a little table tennis but that was all. But it sounded interesting."

The man was Leroy Dobson, who had set up the Hackney Sparrows wheelchair basketball team in 1987. He saw something in the young Ade that afternoon, and soon he was picking him up every Wednesday and ferrying him to practice sessions.

"The first time I got on the court I just thought: wow," says Ade. Adding: "It was like flying in my chair, it was so liberating and eye opening."

Six months later, Leroy told him that he been invited to try out for the GB youth

“The first time I got on the court I just thought: wow. It was like flying in my chair, it was so liberating and eye opening” team. Ade recalls: "That's when I got my first sense that it was something I might be able to do seriously. But it wasn't till 1999, when I got invited to train with the GB senior squad that I saw how far I could go."

"Everything was different there. You had to take everything very seriously, get everywhere on time. The coach wouldn't take any rubbish at all from you. I realised what a huge commitment it would mean. And how much dedication I'd need. But I had to do it to give myself a chance to make this happen."

During those years, Ade put sport before everything, travelling Europe and competing for some of the continent's leading club teams including Zwickau in Germany and Porto Torres in Italy. He made his major international debut at the European Championships in 2003, and represented Great Britain at three World Championships. Still, he says, waiting to hear if he had made it into Team GB for the Beijing Paralympic Games was, 'terrifying'.

Ade recalls: "The squad were brought into a waiting room, to hear their fate. You went into a room, one by one, to hear if we'd been chosen to compete in Beijing, then left by the back door so the other players didn't find out whether you'd been selected or not."

The moment he was told that he had been selected for the Paralympics was, he says: "One of the happiest of my life."

Four years later, the feeling of competing in his home town, so close to Victoria Park where his family still lives today, was 'indescribable'.

Ade recalls: "The seats were absolutely packed. It was nine at night and when we pushed out onto that court it was like nothing else I've ever experienced. Everywhere you went, people would stop and say, 'we're rooting for you'."

This summer's Paralympics in Rio were also phenomenal. Ade says: "Our target was to take the top four. With each game, you get closer to those medals, and by the quarter final, you know it's a knock out. Lose that game, and you've lost your dream."

They didn't lose, however, and Ade and his teammates were wearing bronze medals yet again.

As soon as the Games were over, Ade flew back to Spain where he now lives with his wife. You might think he'd earned a long break but, he says: "At my age you've just got to keep on going..."

New cycle route opens

A three kilometre cycle route, linking up the two wetlands in Hackney and Waltham Forest, has opened to the public. The new route avoids busy roads (see map below)

OIL your chain and pump up your tyres: the brand new three kilometre 'Wetlands to Wetlands' cycling route, linking Hackney with Walthamstow, is now open and ready for riding.

The Council, in partnership with the London Borough of Waltham Forest and London Wildlife Trust, has created a well-signed and lit route between Woodberry Wetlands in Hackney and Walthamstow Wetlands.

The new 'greenway'

route avoids busy roads – such as Amhurst Park and Seven Sisters Road – by linking parks, marshland, quiet back roads and towpaths.

Trees have been planted along the stretch, and new lighting has been installed for the darker evenings.

A new cycle ramp over Spring Hill bridge will also make it easier for cyclists to wheel their bikes over the River Lea and into Walthamstow Wetlands.

Additional work is planned for some junctions, to further improve the route which will be linked to several other 'greenway' routes to Central London, Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park and Walthamstow.

A £120,000 grant from the Mayor of London's Big Green Fund has helped pay for the route, which was supported by more than 1,700 people online in a Big Green Fund public poll.

The wetlands are an oasis for urban wildlife, including birds, bats, aquatic life, plants and trees. It is hoped that the new greenway will encourage people to venture outdoors more, get active and explore the abundance of nature on their doorstep.

A new bike hangar, painted by street artist Tony J Driver, in Gore Road

Bike hangar painted by local street artist opens

HACKNEY'S 150th bike hangar, painted by local street artist Tony J Driver, is now open for residents to keep their bicycles secure and dry on Gore Road, near Victoria Park.

The hangar is only the second bespoke painted unit in London, and the Council is planning more. Painted hangars are set to be commissioned to raise the profile of local artists.

Hackney has the highest level of cycle commuting in London. At least half of all trips undertaken in the borough are by foot and bike, and demand for bike storage continues to grow. The Council receives thousands of requests to provide bike hangars a year, and there are plans to deliver a further 25 units within this financial year.

The bike hangars are part of the Council's commitment to encouraging cycling, as part of its drive towards sustainable transport. Other initiatives include free cycle training for adults and children, and a £10 a month cycle loan scheme.

ART &
EXHIBITIONS*OUT OF LINE*Until, 29 Oct, Mon-Sat, various opening times

This group exhibition explores the different approach each artist has to depicting the human form. Bringing together a group of artists who share a fascination with people and the atmosphere their presence can create. The all-male painters, stencil and graphic artists capture moments in time and challenge social prejudice. Free. Well Hung Gallery, 239, Hoxton Street, N1 5LG. Info: 020 7033 2777; www.wellhung.co.uk/exhibitions/figurative-show/

ACROSS THE FREE LAND
6-16 Oct, various opening times

This exhibition tells a story by using images found on the flags and emblems of countries around the world. The images follow the adventures of a central protagonist, whose appearance changes as he visits different territories and encounters a diverse cast of characters. These characters and elements are taken from flags and the coat of arms of well-known countries, but also from states, overseas territories, former colonies and states which are seeking recognition. LEXIGRAM

15 Oct-5 Nov, Fri & Sat
Lexigram is an exhibition composed of over 40 'digital photograms' (a picture produced with photographic materials, such as light-sensitive paper, but without a camera.). Rather than being exposed by light, they use technology - digital cameras, scanners, photocopiers and printers - to 'expose' already flat representations and develop the results within the confines of a frame, creating a sequence of moments, which unite in the layers of each image. Samantha Donnelly explores the fluidity of representations, specifically the shifting relationships between the physical object and the photographic subject. Free. All ages. # Stoke Newington Music Festival

21-23 October, various Stoke Newington locations

STOKE Newington's bars, pubs and restaurants are set to rock as the neighbourhood's very own music festival returns this month.

Set up to celebrate the vibrant and varied local music scene, the Stoke Newington Music Festival stretches from Stamford Hill to Church Street and down the High Street. This year, you can catch live shows from Thurston Moore of Sonic Youth and Sterling Roswell of Spaceman 3. You'll find local favourites including Pink Cigar and The Pacers at The Mascara Bar, or venture to the festival's less established venues like St Paul's church hall, where family-friendly performances will include poetry and acoustic sets.

Elsewhere you'll find intimate performances in cafes and restaurants, hip-hop DJ sets, raucous guitar bands and harmonising trios, as well as street-performing superstars and reggae selectors.

Promoting talent and local venues isn't the festival's only mission, however. Each year, it also raises money for the sexual health and wellbeing charity, Brook. Festival-goers can text 'SNMF16 £5' to 70070 to donate £5 to Brook.

The event is free although a few participating venues may charge entry. To find out more visit:

Lollipop lady Val (pictured) asks drivers and cyclists to stop when they see them at work, and to respect their job

Stop right now

DRIVERS and cyclists are being asked to stop and not abuse lollipop men and women, who help Hackney's schoolchildren cross busy roads.

There are currently 34 School Crossing Patrol Officers working across the borough. Although the majority of people respect their role, some have had negative experiences with cars, vans, bicycles and motorcycles driving over a zebra crossing, when they are in the middle of the road with children.

The law requires drivers

“The abuse we get is unbelievable and every year it gets worse”

and riders to halt when the 'stop' sign is displayed by the uniformed officer. It is an offence under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 if a driver or rider does not stop when the sign is displayed, failure to do so can result in a £1,000 fine and three points on a driving licence.

Lollipop women Mandy and Val have 25 years' service between them, but Mandy claims her job has recently got harder.

She says: "The abuse we get is unbelievable and every year it gets worse. The parents are lovely and appreciate us keeping them and their children safe, I just wish the drivers would obey the sign."

Val adds: "People just drive on – even when we're in the road."

When asked what they would say to all drivers in Hackney given the chance, Mandy and Val replied: "Stop and have some respect for all lollipop men and women."

"We are doing a job which saves children and people's lives."

Hackney's Children's Services praised in Ofsted report

THE Council has been praised in a report from Ofsted, after its Children's Services were rated 'good' overall, with the experiences and progress of care leavers 'outstanding'.

The City and Hackney Local Safeguarding Children's Board (LSCB), which was included in the inspection, is the first in the country to be rated 'outstanding'.

Following the four-week inspection period in July, Ofsted said that senior figures in Hackney 'have high aspirations for local children and this leads to good outcomes', and highlighted that 'young people leaving care in Hackney have exceptionally positive outcomes, receiving outstanding services leading to sustained improvements in their lives'.

The report also notes that Children's Services in Hackney has excellent in-house clinical services providing swift access to mental health support; adoption services are dynamic and well managed; fostering services are effective and supports carers, ensuring quality care for children; and children at risk of child exploitation, including those who are looked after, receive good quality multi-agency support.

Ofsted reported that the City and Hackney LSCB is an outstanding board with 'strong and credible leadership', citing its 'exemplary effectiveness' in holding partners to account, and its 'ambitious resolve to be the best it can be', which is making a real difference to children's lives. ## Escape to the country: Hackney schoolchildren go wild

SOME 3,000 primary school children from across London met dancing sheep and racing ferrets at the Countryside Live event on Leyton Marshes.

On 21 and 22 September, students from four different London boroughs – including Hackney – uncovered creepy crawlies during mini-beast hunts, petted farm animals and studied bats.

Among those also trying willow weaving, wood turning and blacksmithing were pupils from Woodberry Down

Primary School, N4.

Headteacher Derek Hewie said: "The children came back raving about the dancing sheep. They were so excited that some of them went back that weekend to see them again."

The two-day event, jointly organised by Lee Valley Regional Park Authority and the national charity Countryside Learning, aimed to introduce children to the outdoor world.

Gary Richardson, Chief Executive of Countryside Learning, said: "Countryside Live is a fantastic way to educate, inform and inspire children and young people, bringing together over 40 different exhibitors and activities to give children an unforgettable experience."

Campaigning is getting under way across the borough with over 40 candidates standing for election to Hackney Youth Parliament

Standing for change

By Dila Tumer

FROM manifestos covering everything from education to travel issues, this year's Hackney Youth Parliament (HYP) campaigns are all about ensuring the empowerment, safety, happiness, and wellbeing of all Hackney teens.

Campaigning is getting under way across the borough with over 40 candidates standing for election to HYP.

Previous members include Hackney singing sensation

Jermain Jackman, winner of 'The Voice' 2014, and Ife Grillo, who represented the borough in the UK Youth Parliament and England in an international debating competition.

Over the past two years, members have created campaigns to promote mental health and tackle racism and religious discrimination – particularly intolerance directed at Muslim and Jewish communities.

Past members have also worked together to raise awareness of child sexual exploitation while also helping to develop the youth arts festival, UFest, in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park.

Deputy Mayor, Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, said:

“I'm proud to have such politically engaged young people in Hackney, I'm sure they'll achieve a great deal”

“I'm proud to have such politically engaged young people in Hackney, I'm sure they'll achieve a great deal.”

HYP members represent two constituencies in the borough: Hackney North and Hackney South, and each constituency is allocated 12 members.

As part of Local Democracy Week, which runs from 10 to 14 October, candidates will present their manifesto statements at events in the north and the south of the borough.

Voting takes place in schools and youth centres during October. Results will be announced after a Q&A session with councillors and senior Council staff at Young Hackney Forest Road, E8, on 20 October.

Candidates running for Hackney Youth Parliament

Hackney South: Emmanuel Akin, Omari Benson, Nyah Buffong, Jamie Darke, Sophie Douglas, Khadesha Hibbert, Femi Ijelu, Rose Ilunga, Mafio Ison, Nia John, Maryam Mohamed, Maria Nikolova, Charmaine Nyarkoh, Kayra Ozsezer, Ryan Praag, Kairi Weekes-Sanderson, Kamani Williams, Zakir Williams and Kayrena Williamson.

Hackney North: Raphael Addai, Wesley Baro, Tushig Baygal, Nazmine Begum, Ezra Boateng, Casey Byrne, Lola Cleary, Louis Comach, Kristal Delaney, Shakarah Edwards, Skye Fitzgerald-Mcshane, Zubair Jauffurally, Billie-Jo Moorton-Elderton, Tarah Norris, Justyna Nowak, Maariyah Patel, Aisha Pirbhai, Safaa Pribhai, Khalia Reid, Teejan Samba, Jonathan Senessie, Anwer Siddig, Lottie Thornborrow and Daniel Williams.

Become a City Year volunteer

A YOUTH social action charity is urging young Hackney people to consider choosing to volunteer in schools across the borough.

City Year UK challenges 18 to 25-year-olds to tackle educational inequality by helping to improve pupils' academic achievement.

The 'service year' allows young people to make a difference in their local community, while developing their own leadership skills, through an innovative programme. Sophie Livingstone, charity chief, said: “Businesses are increasingly looking beyond grades for people with leadership, practical and problem solving skills. City Year UK offers exactly this and we're looking for dynamic and diverse young people, who want the opportunity to add something unique to their CV.”

Volunteers receive a bursary and are also reimbursed for any travel expenses incurred through City Year activities. For more info, or to apply, visit: www.cityyear.org.uk; or call: 020 7014 2680.

London Fashion Week debut

A HACKNEY teenager saw her creation come to life on the London Fashion Week catwalk, thanks to an innovative project run by a local charity.

On 19 September Nusra Njimber got to realise her dream of seeing her designs on the catwalk following a 10-week period of workshops with charity FAD.

The workshops were part of the organisation's 'Fashion Futures' project, which aims to achieve equal opportunities for everyone in the industry.

Nusra said: “Fashion Futures has taught me that I need to stop placing boundaries and restricting myself. I've learnt so much and I've had a lot of help from volunteers.”

Nusra was joined by other finalists, who were the youngest designers to showcase their work at London Fashion Week. The group were shortlisted from over 100 teenagers who took part in FAD workshops earlier this year.

Cllr Jonathan McShane with User Led Training Project members. The Hackney CVS initiative won a Patients' Association Award

User led training award

A GROUP of local disabled people have won a prestigious national award for the 'bold' training courses they have designed and delivered to NHS workers.

Members of the User Led Training Project, an initiative run by Hackney CVS, were awarded a Patients' Association Award in the summer. They were singled out for 'innovative ways of involvement' after spending a year creating training programmes that encourage NHS staff to be more patient-focused.

“ This unique training puts service users and health and social staff in the same room together ”

Project Coordinator, Jane Bell, explained: “This unique training puts service users and health and social staff in the same room together to explore what best practice looks like.”

So far, the pilot has seen the group train over 170 nurses, GPs, care certificate trainees and apprentices in Homerton hospital and primary care services across the borough.

Now that continued funding has been secured, Hackney CVS plans to expand the project, involving more disabled residents as trainers and increasing the number of training programmes.

Elsbeth Williams delivered a training session at Homerton hospital.

She said: “I enjoyed telling my story – I definitely felt that the Homerton trainees were really engaged. I'd love to do it again.”

Keep warm with Hackney SHINE

ENERGY advice group Hackney SHINE (Seasonal Health Interventions Network) is calling on vulnerable residents to get in touch if they are worried about the colder months ahead.

The service, which aims to improve seasonal health and wellbeing, is for people over 65; low income families with children under five; disabled people; and residents with respiratory and cardiovascular conditions.

John Farrell, 76, (pictured) was referred to Hackney SHINE by the Council's Adult Social Care team for help with applying for additional health benefits. The SHINE team contacted John to discuss his needs before requesting a pensions' home visit, a free fire-safety check from London Fire Brigade, and a free home energy advice visit. SHINE can also help residents apply for the £140 Warm Home Discount.

For more info, or to refer someone to the service, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/shine; or call: 0800 281 768.

Network helps people in crisis

TWO of East London's top mental health organisations have launched a new network to support those in crisis. The service user network is run jointly by the charity City and Hackney Mind and East London NHS Foundation Trust.

Launched on 5 August, it is facilitated by professional health workers, but run by the participants themselves, who support one another and develop coping strategies together.

Dr David Bridle, Consultant Psychiatrist with East London NHS Foundation Trust, said: “It means that people struggling with mental health issues have a space to go to get support from others who understand their situation. And it provides an environment for them to consider ways to cope going forward.”

Quit smoking for good by taking part in this year's Stoptober campaign

THE Council is encouraging the borough's 45,000 smokers to take part in this year's Stoptober campaign in October.

Based on research that shows people who stop smoking for 28 days are five times more likely to quit for good, the Council is encouraging smokers to choose from a range of free support such as the Hackney Stop Smoking Service, e-cigarettes, or the Stoptober mobile app.

Since January 2015, nearly 2,500 smokers in Hackney have quit smoking with the help of free, local and personalised support from Hackney Stop Smoking Service. Those who take up this help are up to four times more likely to successfully quit.

Hanim Boyraz, who quit with help from a Turkish-speaking Stop Smoking Service adviser, said: “I did not like being a smoker. I hated to smell of cigarettes. But I was under the control of nicotine. Now, I have more energy, am less tired and most importantly, I feel back in control of my life.”

To join the Stoptober campaign, visit: www.nhs.uk/smokefree.

For more info, visit: www.smokefreehackney.org; or call: 0800 046 9946.

Stop smoking advisers will be promoting Stoptober at GP practices and pharmacies across the borough.

Brilliant black British theatre

By Niti Acharya

IN the early part of the 20th century, black theatre in Britain relied heavily on imports from around the world, particularly New York.

There were exceptions, like 'Calypso' which opened in London in 1948. It was the first musical with a Caribbean cast and theme. The date was significant. Opening night was a month before the Windrush ship brought the first Caribbean migrants to Britain.

Immigration in the late 1950s and early 1960s, saw a wave of Caribbean writers arrive in Britain. For those who joined the small but growing black theatre community in Britain, the struggle to create space for – and to voice – their own aspirations and views of themselves and the world was symptomatic of a wider struggle for national independence and dignified personal survival.

While radio provided opportunities, with a person's colour hidden from view, amateur or semi-professional club theatres offered very few openings. Access to the professional stage, television and film was severely restricted for newly arrived migrants.

This gradually began to change as pioneers pushed the boundaries and created opportunities for talented people marginalised by other avenues, such as The Negro Theatre Workshop. It was established in 1961 by Edric and Pearl Connor from Trinidad and they called together a large group of black actors and writers, mostly Caribbean, to found the organisation. Its aim was to put on productions that would provide experience and improve standards in every branch of the theatre.

“ Access to the professional stage, television and film was severely restricted for newly arrived migrants ”

Through lack of finance, it never had its own theatre, but instead organised classes and produced plays in churches, town halls and community centres such as King's Hall in Clapton.

Theatre of Black Women was established in Dalston in 1982 by Bernardine Evaristo, Patricia Hilaire and Paulette Randall, in response to the lack of roles for black actors at the time.

Its aim was to promote positive depictions of black women. The characters were independent, and shown discovering and celebrating their own black identity and supporting one another. The company ran workshops on drama and theatre writing for young women in Hackney. The co-founders are still active artistic practitioners, and Paulette Randall was Associate Director for the London 2012 Olympic Opening Ceremony.

Sistren Theatre Collective began as an organisation of working class women who used popular theatre techniques to explore the social, political and legal conditions and status of Jamaican women. Focusing particularly on poor black women, Sistren used personal stories to critique a system which discriminated against women on the basis of gender, class and colour.

The collective toured

Hackney in 1990 to share these techniques with local women, many of whom had roots in Jamaica and identified with the collective.

The Black Theatre Co-operative (now Nitro) was founded in 1979 by Trinidadian playwright Mustapha Matura, and director Charlie Hanson.

Frustrated by the lack of interest from London fringe theatres in Matura's new play 'Welcome Home Jacko', Matura and Hanson set up their own theatre company. The play was presented at The Factory in Paddington, in May 1979. It marked the beginnings of the Black Theatre Co-operative. The company supported, commissioned and produced work by black writers in Britain, including productions at Hoxton Hall.

Black theatre movements such as these supported a growing pool of skilled actors and the development of a network of university, community and arts venues prepared to present diverse work showed a change in attitudes in British theatre. This was reflected by people's experiences in Hackney where black British theatre found a supportive audience and has continued to flourish.

Find out more at 'People Power: Black British Arts & Activism in Hackney 1960s – 2000s' on at Hackney Museum until January.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville, was directly elected by the borough in September 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3220. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Rosemary Sales.

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food For Life Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge. Mackerel is an oily fish rich in omega-3 oils. These are essential fatty acids; our bodies cannot produce them, so we have to get them from the foods we eat. It can be beneficial in lowering cholesterol, inflammation, and improving mental health. We should try to eat at least two portions of oily fish per week. One portion is approximately 140g. Look out for the Marine Stewardship Council (MSC) logo in your local supermarket to ensure you're buying sustainable, wild-caught seafood.

Mackerel kedgeree

Serves 4-6

Preparation time
20 mins

Cooking time
15 mins

Ingredients

- 6 eggs
- 4 smoked mackerel fillets
- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 1 bunch of spring onions
- 1 tbsp ground cumin
- 1 tbsp ground coriander seeds
- 1 tsp turmeric
- 1 head of cauliflower, separated into florets
- Lime, optional
- Plain yoghurt, to serve.

For the bulgur wheat

- 300g fine bulgur wheat
- 3 cloves garlic
- 4 bay leaves
- 2 tsp turmeric
- Handful of parsley.

Method

- Pre-heat the oven to 200 degrees
- Boil a pot of water for the eggs. Once the water is boiling gently lower the eggs in and cook for 8-9 minutes. Drain and put under cold water to stop them cooking; once cool enough peel and set aside
- Cover the bulgur wheat with boiling water, add the bay leaves, garlic cloves, turmeric and leave, covered, for 10 minutes
- Place cauliflower florets onto a baking tray and drizzle over 1 tablespoon of olive oil. Roast for 5-7 minutes until golden and tender
- Slice the spring onions and gently fry in olive oil with the turmeric, cumin and coriander for 5-10 minutes. Once cooked add to the bulgur
- Remove the mackerel from the skin and flake into the rice. Add in the spring onion mix and cauliflower, cut the egg into quarters and serve on top of the bulgur wheat
- Season with pepper and serve with plain yoghurt and a squeeze of lime.

Have your say on new uses for Stoke Newington Town Hall

RESIDENTS and business owners are being asked for their opinions on proposals to open up empty and underused parts of Stoke Newington Town Hall and Library to fund vital maintenance work.

The Council has spent over £5million refurbishing the buildings, and further maintenance work is needed. Over the coming years, it is estimated that the Council will need to spend a further £10million to protect and maintain these important historic and community assets.

The Grade II listed town hall is one of the borough's key landmarks, but many parts of the building are underused. The Council chamber, assembly hall and core library spaces will be retained, but the Council wants to look at how it can best use some other underused spaces to help fund essential works.

Ideas include renting some areas of the buildings to local businesses and artists as workspace for offices or studios. There is also the potential to develop some housing to the rear of the town hall.

The Council is aiming to gather people's thoughts and ideas about what additional purposes the buildings could be used for, to help shape its draft proposals.

The consultation closes on 14 November. To have your say, fill in a questionnaire at Stoke Newington Library or visit: consultation.hackney.gov.uk

The Council wants ideas on how to fund future maintenance works
